NCAA Information for All Athletes

NCAA schools participate in one of three divisions; I, II and III. These divisions are based on size of school, level of athletic commitment and competition. Athletes may be recruited by colleges but most often, students must research and initiate interest in an athletic program. Talk to your coach about the possibility of playing at the college level and familiarize yourself with eligibility requirements and recruiting regulations at NCAA.org.

To play for Division I or II schools, you must register with the NCAA. If you think you may be eligible to play sports in college at the Division I or Division II level, register online at the beginning of your junior year at the NCAA Eligibility Center. To play for Division III schools, your application occurs directly with the school.
